

Amaia Salamanca (22)

Without bra there is no paradise

With that body, the former heartthrob of the Duque would look divine in any old thing. In the braless Ralph Lauren number, however, she stopped being fine and deserved being fined. She was well better in this red Manuel Mota at the James Bond premiere in Valencia.

Paula Echevarría (31)

She busta left her legs at home

Why hide her body if she is already recovered after giving birth to Daniela six months ago? The Elio Benhayer dress did very little for Busta's wife... and for her personal trainer's kudos. It's much better when she shows a bit of leg, as she did a few months ago at a magazine bash.

Pilar Rubio (29)

Why did you do it?

Her Vicky Martín Berrocal number left very little to the imagination. Excessive cleavage, an indiscreet see-through fabric... And let's not get started on the fringes! At the 2007 TP awards ceremony, however, she passed with flying colours in a demure BCBG.

Eva González (28)

Miss-managed assets

She was a perfect fit as host for the TP awards ceremony, but her number couldn't keep abreast. The Hannibal Laguna design paid little justice to her cleavage. Just this Summer, however, even Cayetano Rivera fell victim to her charms in this hot Dsquared2 piece.

...Demi One Moore Size. We don't know if it resulted from a last minute contretemps or from swollen feet, but these stilettos were certainly not made for her. She wore them to present 'Happy Tears', a movie which was poorly received at the Berlin Festival.

Alice, what De-llal is that? Carlota Casiraghi's sister-in-law knows no shame. This is how she attended a prize ceremony: in a see-through number and with a haircut that could have sprung from Edward Scissorhands's mind. The claw-shaped gloves put the finishing touch to her impossible look.

It's all about falling in Love Kurt Cobain's widow, Courtney Love, wouldn't pass the pen-test... Her breasts are so saggy that the least she could have done is buy a brassiere (or wear another dress). And as if this isn't enough, rumour has it that her new beau is Mickey Rourke. Now that's quite a pair...

Pfeiffer, art running through her veins... That must be why they are so knotty. Michelle, 50, is so slim that she looks more like 20. But she shouldn't cross the line: packing a couple of pounds would work wonders for her ankles. This is how we saw her at the Berlinale, promoting 'Cheri'.

Jowly Madonna! At 50 they are bent on slimming to look younger, but all too often it's counterproductive. Now that's a double-chin! She could be her very own granny. Never mind the facelifts, gravitation rules!

Sarah Jessica Parker, gaudy in the city If the producers see her in this outfit, there won't be any silver screen 'Sex and the city' sequel. Does she actually think hooves are in? If she really had to show off an accessory, she should have played it safe with a pair of gloves, because really, those hands...

Marina Castaño's 'tightly packed' day Camel... errr... Camilo José Cela's widow was all for her looks on the 7th... or at least, she tried. She left home early in the morning and went straight to the gym until late in the evening. It's hard to say what "impressed" us the most: the all-too-close-fitting sport pants, the pony tail, her skin, that frown... Girl, when at home dress as you like, but if you are a celebrity and go out like that, you are bound to shock-and-awe people into taking such pictures of you...

Look out, Stone, you are crumbling! Nobody disputes her sex appeal at nearly 51, but Sharon would better hide those flabby thighs. She flaunted them in London at a post-Bafta party. Not that she has any issues with them: she tried later to hit on 18 year old Dev Patel, of 'Slumdog Millionaire' fame.

Whitney got paunch If you go clubbing to show off your boy-toy (her boyfriend, rapper Ray J, is 16 years younger), make sure that your see-through garments guard your not-so-magnificent body better. Whitney, dear, we know that at 46 you just don't give a damn... but don't expect him to be singing 'I Will Always Love You' any time soon!

Hilt-on to your goods, Paris! The party queen came dangerously close to having a nip-slip when leaving a club in LA. Certain cleavages just won't do for some poses...

¿Quieres ser millonario? Mejor ser Freida

DESPUÉS de ver la última película de Danny Boyle, la fabulosa Slumdog Millionaire, nos ha embelesado el sentido de la moda de la guapísima protagonista, Freida Pinto.

La ex modelo irradia glamour clásico y por ahora tiene a la alfombra roja rendida a sus Jimmy Choo.

Esta semana nos encandiló en la entrega de premios del Directors Guild of America con este vestido metálico asimétrico del original diseñador americano Zac Posen. Pero los casi 3000€ que cuesta esta maravilla brillante también dejaría asimétrico nuestro presupuesto.

Freida lleva: Vestido, 2990€, Zac Posen; zapatos de tacón, 490€; bolso, 420€, Jimmy Choo

Total: 3900€
